Land donated for future Dysart rec centre

By Joseph Quigley

Dysart et al has been gifted a piece of land that could someday hold a new recreation centre.

The municipality made the gift public at a council meeting Nov. 26. The 15.75-acre block is at the corner of County Road 21 and Soyer's Lake Road, across from the Pinestone Resort. A condition of the transfer is that it can only be used for a new rec centre.

Marnnie Blair made the donation to honour her parents, Lee and Marie Blair.

"The community meant a lot to both of my parents and, as such, I am delighted to make this contribution to the health and well-being of all," she said in a message to the township.

She declined an interview but added she is glad "to support the community in this way"

Mayor Andrea Roberts said it is an area she has considered for years and she is excited by its possibilities.

"I am absolutely thrilled," Roberts said.
"It's flat, it's on County Road 21, it's the last property that's actually on sewers."

However, Roberts said although this is a good first step, she emphasized the municipality is a long way from starting any development.

"This is fairly far off in the future. I don't even think anything will happen in this term of council," Roberts said.

It is no certainty that the piece of land will be the site of Dysart's next recreation centre, with no feasibility study yet done. But Roberts said the municipality did not own any excess land which would be a good fit.

"The reality is there's very little land that we have to build anything like that on," Roberts said.

She said there are issues with A.J. LaRue Arena as a community centre, such as accessibility. Though she does not expect to start advancing a new rec centre in 2020, she said council might strike a committee later in its term.

"It's an asset for the community," Roberts said. "This isn't something that's going to be done just with council."

Teachers go on one-day strike

By Joseph Quigley

Haliburton Highlands Secondary School teachers joined colleagues across the province in a one-day strike Dec. 4.

The Ontario Secondary School Teacher's Federation (OSSTF) and the province remain at a standstill in negotiations over a new collective agreement. Issues include the province's planned cuts to high school funding, mandating e-learning courses and compensation.

Local teacher and OSSTF branch president Ryan Merritt said this is something they would rather not be doing.

"No one wants to be on the picket line, "Merritt said. "But it's a series of steps to work towards our goals. It shows a collective unity towards challenging these cuts to education."

Minister of Education Stephen Lecce said it is the OSSTF that has to move in negotiations.

"The onus is on OSSTF to be reasonable, stay at the table and to cancel this needless escalation that is hurting children, parents and families," he said.

Supportive community members joined teachers throughout the day. Concerned Citizens of Haliburton County's Bonnie Roe said she felt it was important to show solidarity.

"I'm just a firm believer if we come together as a community, we can make a difference and have a voice," she said.

Community grieves for one of its own

Justin Daniels was remembered Saturday for his love of family and carpentry during a Celebration of Life and Reception at the Haliburton Legion.

Family, friends, co-workers and acquaintances are grieving the loss of the 37-year-old tragically killed in a motor vehicle accident Nov. 20 in Algonquin Highlands.

A GoFundMe page started by his mother, Valerie, a former owner of the Oakview Lodge and Marina, has garnered more than $30,000 for Daniels' wife Michelle and children, Peyton, Cameryn, and Addison.

Images of Daniels played on a projector on the wall, accompanied by county and western music. A table gave some insight into the type of man he was. It featured pictures of him and his family, work boots and other tools of his carpentry trade, a guitar, and a photo of him on a dirt bike.

Irene Gerber, the wife of Justin's boss, John, was the emcee. She said people had gathered in sadness and love.

she said. She added that when a tragedy such as Justin's death occurs, "the first reaction is disbelief and an outpouring of emotion." However, "something amazing takes its place," in describing how people had rallied around the family, including starting a MealTrain to provide daily meals to the family.

John said Justin had worked for him for about five years, and "I very quickly came to realize that he was highly dependable, a leader, and a skilled craftsmen." He said the young man's positive attitude and upbeat nature made the job site a fun place to be.

He added that Justin, "garnered respect through his high standards and work ethic" and stood out amongst his peers.

He said their team had built many homes and cottages over the years and Justin often befriended clients and would tailor the workmanship to their needs, particularly the female clients. "They would share their vision and idea and Justin would make them all come true."

He further described him as a "sincere, honest, hardworking family man. Providing for his family was in the core of who he was. His presence will be deeply missed by his coworkers and myself. His absence will be large but his shadow will watch over us on all future projects and we will strive to pursue the excellence he pursued every day as a legacy to him."

County secures Haliburton Wee Care future

By Joseph Quigley

The County of Haliburton hopes to protect the future of Haliburton Wee Care daycare after purchasing its facility for $770,000.

Council agreed Nov. 27 to have bylaws presented for the purchase of the County Road 21 property in Dysart et al. The municipality is buying it from the Hodgson family, who started and managed the nonprofit Wee Care but want to retire. The daycare currently leases the property from the Hodgsons and will continue to under county ownership.

Chief administrative officer Mike Rutter said the City of Kawartha Lakes, which manages child care on behalf of the county, noticed the Wee Care property up for sale in 2018. He said the family is committed to Wee Care and did not want to leave it in the lurch. The municipality stepped in to buy it.

"This ensures that both day cares in the County remain in public ownership and stable ownership," Rutter said.

The municipality also purchased the Ontario Early Years Centre daycare facility in Minden in August for $2, to ensure that daycare could continue running.

Wee Care supervisor Denise Wolm said it is a positive development.

"It's been a great thing for us because the county is working on our behalf. They're looking to support us in whatever way possible. It's not going to change much for the day-to-day operation," she said.

Wolm added she hopes the municipality can help secure provincial funding so the facility can expand and take on more children. She said they are licenced for 24 pre-schoolers and 10 toddlers but have a waiting list of approximately 30.

Wolm said management briefly explored a new location in light of the Hodgsons selling the property, but it was not a serious threat. She added the board of directors also examined purchasing the property themselves as a non-profit but found it was not feasible.

"This is definitely the best arrangement we could possibly hope for," she said.

The annual rental revenue for the property is $36,000, which will pay off the county's purchase in 21 years. With interest, the county expects the annual taxpayer-funded investment will be no more than $15,000.

Rutter said the property is large enough to be the site of future development near the daycare, suggesting housing or community

Coun. Andrea Roberts commended the purchase.

"Really good day for young families in Haliburton County. I can't image not knowing where my child is going to go to," Roberts said. "This is sort of a forever and I think this is really forward thinking ... just as much as we need doctors in our community, we need daycares."

Housing impacts drug problem

By Joseph Quigley

Human Services and Justice Coordinating Committee of Haliburton County co-chair Andrew Hodson said he sees problems with what is available to vulnerable people.

The committee hosted a public discussion at the Lakeside Baptist Church Nov. 28 about substance abuse and how it can be addressed in Haliburton.

As people described their personal experiences and struggles getting help, Hodson said he understands that difficulty.

"When they do reach out and don't get it, it's just an absolute travesty," Hodson, a worker with Four County Crisis, said. "We don't have a homelessness shelter up here. We can do all the stuff in addictions but people don't have a place to live.

"I'm incredibly worried about our county."

Canadian Mental Health Association (CMHA) Traumatic grief specialist Yvette Perreault facilitated the event. She described the severity of deaths in the opioid crisis, with more than 12,000 since 2016 according to the Government of Canada.

"Society's response is still hostile," Perreault said. "It's a crazy amount of numbers but you wouldn't necessarily know that, because people aren't necessarily up in arms about it."

The Haliburton, Kawartha Lakes, Northumberland Drug Strategy said there were 145 confirmed opioidrelated emergency department visits in 2018, but the tri-county data could not be broken down further.

Minden's Dr. Nell Thomas attended and said local data on overdoses has issues, as emergency departments may not log them if a patient reports a different issue. But she said based on her caseloads, she has "a lot of people who are suffering" from a variety of addictions.

She added although there are prescriptions to address opioid abuse, options are lacking for stimulant-type drugs such as cocaine. She said there are not many options, although efforts are being made to find solutions.

"We're working to find safe alternatives for people," Thomas said. But people showed solidarity throughout the discussion and talked about ways to improve the situation.

"We're in this together," Perreault said. "There's a vulnerability here but these conversations matter about how we're going to take care of each other."

"It has to be flipping over of our culture," attendee Jean Schlicklin Tyler said. "It has to be a wake-up call."

Hodson also identified waiting lists and transportation as issues. But he re-affirmed that housing is a bedrock needed to address substance abuse.

"It's just fundamental in people's basic support system," Hodson said. "Offer them a home with dignity, somewhere they feel safe. I just don't think any of the other stuff, the higher levels of needs can be addressed (without that)."

Schmale shadow minister for crown-indigenous relations

MP Jamie Schmale has been named the Shadow Minister for Crown-Indigenous Relations.

In a media release, his office said the appointment reflected a commitment to holding the government accountable to improving the relationship between the government and Indigenous communities.

Schmale said it is an honour.

"The goal is to reflect the growing strength of the Conservative team and our commitment to work for Canadians from coast to coast," he said.

"I believe that it is time to work together to create a positive future for Indigenous youth, including increasing economic and education opportunities.

"We must support those who are affected by their relationship with the Crown, and work to bring forward policies that make real and measurable improvements in the lives of Indigenous Peoples of Canada," Schmale added.

During the 42nd Parliament, Schmale served as shadow minister for Northern Ontario and deputy shadow minister for natural resources.

Land Trust gets grant

The Haliburton Highlands Land Trust said it will use a $36,375 federal government grant to map and evaluate the Kendrick Creek Wetland Complex.

The Land Trust announced Nov. 26 it had been given the grant courtesy of Environment and Climate Change Canada.

The Land Trust said in a news release that the complex is 849 hectares in size.

They noted that wetlands significantly reduce the impact of flooding.

They're also an important habitat for species at risk and reduce the carbon footprint.

"We are looking forward to connecting with landowners in this complex to acknowledge their excellent wetland stewardship and to provide information on a variety of incentive programs that are available to support this stewardship," Mary-Lou Gerstl, chair of the HHLT, said.

Speaker: 'May the horse be with you'

By Lisa Gervais

People left the Inspiring Women's Luncheon Nov. 28 with some strategies to gain inner balance and mental strength to get them through setbacks and distractions.

Sharon Campbell Rayment was the guest speaker at the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce event at the Haliburton Legion last Thursday.

She shared the story of how a fall from her beloved horse, Malachi, led to an acquired brain injury that rendered her one of only 60 people in the world to have Foreign Accent Syndrome. She now speaks with a Scottish brogue.

At one point, she was diagnosed as being "completely disabled."

She said that after the accident about 10 years ago, she struggled to speak and stuttered. She was no longer a busy, thriving entrepreneur, wife and mother. Instead, she was anxious, overwhelmed, depressed, frustrated, and pining for her old life.

She said she erupted one day, from tiredness and anger, while working in the barn. She then went out to the horses and Malachi came right up to bar.

"He put his chin on my shoulder, slowly and gently lifted it over my head to the other side. He pressed his neck to my ear and I could hear his heart beat. And it was strong. And it was true. And I swear I heard ... 'I know you're lonely. I know you're angry. And I know you're frustrated but I'm right here. I'm as close to you as that heartbeat, as that breath, and in that moment I knew that if I had not fallen I would have missed the very rhythm of life," Campbell Rayment told a hushed audience.

"And what is the rhythm of life? To me it's being present. Present to where you are. Present to whom you're with and what you're doing."

She said that prior to her accident, she filled her life with busyness, spending a lot of time physically in one place, but always thinking about another.

She has worked ever since on rewiring her brain and designed something called the NeuroMindSHIFT process.

"After three years of struggle and research, I have confirmed that we can change our brains to help the mind overcome the anxiety and common traps that distract, disrupt, and lock us into ineffectiveness" her website says.

She walked the audience through a guided mediation, got them to get up and move to deal with their anxious "fight or flight" response, to yawn to release tension and taught them to use a pressure point in their hand.

"Because we all experience stress, don't we?" She said the only time there is no stress is "when the undertaker undertakes to take you under."

The woman, who continues to work with horses, ended her talk by wishing the audience, "may the horse be with you."

Scott promotes Ontario at Washington meetings

Premier Doug Ford and Minister of Infrastructure Laurie Scott were in Washington D.C. Dec. 4 to meet with business leaders and politicians.

In a press release, the government said the two would meet with the governor of Maryland and chair of the National Governors Association, Larry Hogan, as well as Maryland Secretary of Commerce Kelly Schulz.

"Ontario has strong trade ties with Maryland, and I'm looking forward to meeting with business leaders and officials to explore opportunities to promote Ontario's world-class infrastructure market," said Scott.

"Our message is clear: Ontario is one of the best places to build and invest."

Minister Scott was also participating in a fireside chat with the Australian Ambassador to the United States, Joe Hockey, at the P3 Government Conference.

Securing day care a good move

This week's news - that the County has purchased the Haliburton Wee Care daycare for $770,000 - brings the local daycare story full circle.

The purchase comes about a year after Minden, and the County, got a real scare in June 2018 when The Children's Learning Centre gave parents just one week's notice that they were shutting their doors.

Some 52 families received a letter saying the only licensed daycare in the town was closing. They cited ongoing concerns over funding, coupled with a growing administrative burden.

It was one of the hardest weeks for not only those families, but municipal staff and councillors, who scrambled to find a solution.

Peterborough-based company, Compass Early Learning and Care, stepped in with a new agreement to continue daycare at the Ontario Early Years Centre (OEYC) in Minden without service disruption. The deal allowed them to use the existing child care space on Prentice Street effective the very day the former centre was slated to close.

In August of this past year, there was another development on the daycare front. The OEYC board transferred ownership of the daycare facility to the County of Haliburton for $2.

At the time, Minden Hills Mayor Brent Devolin said the municipal control should prevent a similar situation from happening again.

It gave parents some sense of security after going through that tumultuous week of scrambling to find alternative day care, when there was really none to be found.

While the purchase did not change the day-to-day operations of the facility, since Compass Early Learning and Care manages the daycare under the oversight of the City of Kawartha Lakes, the asset itself came into possession locally. It can be argued that it guarantees in perpetuity that it can't go away.

Since then, the facility has gotten 23 new childcare spaces, and up to $750,000 in capital funding from the province.

Now, the County is doing the same thing for Dysart et al. In buying the only licensed daycare there, the hope is to protect the future of that facility as well.

County Council agreed Nov. 27 to have bylaws presented for the purchase of the County Road 21 property in Dysart et al. The municipality is buying it from the Hodgson family, who started and managed the non-profit Wee Care but want to retire.

The daycare currently leases the property from the Hodgsons and will continue to under County ownership.

"This ensures that both day cares in the County remain in public ownership and stable ownership," CAO Mike Rutter said.

By Lisa Gervais

Again, it won't change the day-to-day operations. However, it is an indication of greater municipal support and involvement, indeed bringing some assurance to Haliburton families.

They daycare's mangers are hoping the municipality can help secure provincial funding so the facility can expand and take on more children.

Parents across the county can now breathe a sigh of relief, and the moves demonstrate forward-thinking on behalf of the County.

Having secure day care further sends a message that Haliburton County is a good place to work, live and play for potential newcomers, including the medical professionals we so desperately need.

Winter woes not so unexpected

Why is it some of us are still caught off guard when winter makes its presence known?

I am referring to those who express surprise when suddenly the front lawn is covered with snow, burying the garden hose and sprinkler, or those shocked to learn that it could be a week and a half or more before the garage can install the winter tires. After all, we have been welcoming winter, in one form or another since, well, forever.

Listening to CBC radio this past weekend, one couldn't help but get the impression that our good friends in Toronto were in full crisis mode. Panic stricken reporters were seemingly tracing the movement of every plough and sander in the metropolitan area. Those responsible for snow clearing were hunted down for sound bites that would provide any hint of how and when the city was going to emerge from the sudden appearance of snow, ves snow, on city streets and sidewalks. With militarylike precision these road clearing managers described the efforts underway to ensure that no one should have to confront a flake covered road or sidewalk. (An all season problem every time I drive into Toronto.)

It all sounded rather, I don't know, excessive. I like to think if our forefathers, the people living here 50 years ago, had heard such carryings-on, they would have been beside themselves to hear the histrionics that greeted the first significant snowfalls of the season. To them, winter was just another season, expected to arrive anytime after November 1 and to reveal itself with a blanket of snow and cold temperatures.

Now, if the snow had arrived, say at the end of September, I can see some reason for exclamations of surprise, however the snow that fell this past weekend was, if anything, a little late in marking winter's arrival.

Of course, the usual chorus of climate skeptics could be heard, throwing around with a sly smirk, the question: Whatever happened to global warming? Well, global warming continues apace as the neverending reports from the United Nations and the warning letters signed by thousands of scientists tell us. While it might be convenient, if the warming these experts tell us is happening, could somehow resolve our woe over the snow filled streets, the fact is global warming leads to climate change which will have a more telling impact on the planet we continue to treat with utter disrespect. The climate is changing and those changes are creating problems for people around the globe: raging fires in California and Australia, flooding in Bangladesh and Italy, drought in western United States and north Africa ... all indications that the climate of the world is changing and not for the better.

So the problems we encounter as a blanket of snow descends on our part of the world, on schedule in November or December, should not cause any ripple of concern. In fact its arrival should be greeted with a sigh of relief that, while we may be slightly inconvenienced or annoyed, winter's arrival was right on time. When December gets here and we haven't seen a speck of snow, then I think we should be concerned.

Council sets priorities

Council plans to prioritize county-wide broadband, a governance review, economic development, sustainability and climate change adaptation over the next few years.

Council approved a list of priorities, a vision and a mission Nov. 29. Their selections stem from a strategy workshop held Sept. 6.

The document offers some timelines for the priorities. The municipality plans to complete a governance review by June 2021.

The municipality hopes to draft and implement the community-centred side of its climate change plan between 2022-2024. It also intends to decide on whether to hire someone for economic development in the first quarter of 2021.

County adopts housing and homelessness plan

The County of Haliburton officially has a strategy for how it will address housing and homelessness over the next decade.

County council voted Nov. 27 to endorse the 10-year Housing and Homelessness Plan developed by the City of Kawartha Lakes. The plan establishes a vision for addressing issues, including targets for developing affordable homes.

"The plan is really focused on the low and middle-income households and making sure that we have adequate housing for those individuals," city manager of human services Hope Lee told council. "The work has been extensive."

The plan has already been adopted by the city. Under it, the county will attempt to create 750 new affordable housing units over the next decade, while the city will try for 1,280.

Chief administrative officer Mike Rutter highlighted how the county is advancing that goal, with $125,000 in the draft 2020 budget for the second half of the Minden Pinegrove Place affordable housing development. Another $75,000 is allotted for another development with a non-profit.

"Your work is much appreciated," Warden Liz Danielsen told Lee. "It's good to see we have a solid plan moving forward."

Danielsen staying as warden

Danielsen is keeping her position as county warden.

She was the only person on council to submit a qualified nomination form, for herself, for the appointed position.

Danielsen is acclaimed and will be swornin for at least one more year as warden Dec. 17.

Council members interested in the deputy warden position, currently filled by Dave Burton, can vie for it Dec. 18. If needed, council will vote on candidates in January.

(County of Haliburton News compiled by Joseph Quigley).

Minden endorses services review

Minden Hills council formally gave its support to a service delivery and governance review currently underway at County Council and further pledged 12.5 per cent of the costs associated with it.

Warden Liz Danielsen and County CAO Mike Rutter spoke at their Nov. 26 meeting. The two have already addressed Algonquin Highlands and Dysart et al councils, with just Highlands East to go.

Rutter said the County is being assisted by Michael Fenn, who recently led the regional reviews for the province and has a distinguished career as a civil servant and consultant. He's also a Dysart et al property owner.

Rutter said Fenn "observed that best practice in good governance is summarized as 'form follows function.'

"Once decisions are made about the best way to organize and deliver individual services or to make policy in specific areas, then it is clearer who should be responsible and how they should go about managing, governing and financing them. Once the service delivery review is complete, Council will be in a much better position to decide on an appropriate governance model," Rutter said.

The plan is for an RFP for that review to go out before the end of the year. Rutter said he anticipates hiring a consultant early in the new year. He added the final report must now be done by June of 2021, not the fall of next year, as previously thought.

Danielsen said the last amalgamation in Haliburton County caused 'angst' over fears of loss of identity and it was something they did not want to happen this time around.

Coun. Bob Carter said he is pleased the County is going through with this "very useful exercise." However, he felt it was a bottom up, rather than a top down approach. He said an argument could be made for setting goals and then working top down. He added that angst "doesn't mean it's the wrong decision to make. It doesn't mean we shouldn't do it or that we don't have to do it."

He added that he hoped someone was looking at the governance model, not just at how to spend money.

Response to Garbutt

In response to two delegations made by Jim Garbutt of Garbutt Disposals, the township has approved paying $100/tonne for cardboard processing.

Further, council has also approved the request to have Waste Connections of Bracebridge directly invoice the township for any processing it does.

It has also decided that it will accept IC&I (industrial, commercial and institutional) waste and all recyclables with a volume limit for loads accepted of OCC (old corrugated cardboard), to include a fee for cost recovery.

Staff have so far recommended charging a little over $10 per cubic metre for those bringing in .3 to 2.3 cubic metres of carboard. Up to .3 cubic metres would be free and more than 2.3 cubic metres not accepted at any site. It would allow for cost recovery and a small revenue, director of public works, Travis Wilson, said.

Cultural Centre repairs

The township has finally closed off its cultural centre repairs file after a series of burst pipes in the roof last January.

Emily Stonehouse, economic development, destination and marketing officer and supervisor of the Minden Hills Cultural Centre, said the township had to pay a $10,000 deductible and received federal and provincial government HST rebates of a combined $7,328.69. The insurance company paid the remaining $56,349.45.

Stonehouse said the stages included an emergency teardown and rebuild.

"It's done ... that's the important thing," she told council.

Successful town hall to be repeated

By Lisa Gervais

With 50 people attending their firstever town hall meeting this past Saturday in Haliburton, Dysart et al Mayor Andrea Roberts and Deputy Mayor Pat Kennedy said they hope to have another in the spring - and twoa-year going forward in their terms of office.

The public packed the 2-4 p.m. session Nov. 28, asking about a range of issues including: landfills; the County's shared services review; the need for electric vehicle recharging stations; heavy traffic on the County Road 21 corridor just outside of the village; road deterioration at snowmobile crossings; the future of Head Lake Park; housing; the prospect of municipal water and roads in general.

Businessman Jerry Walker asked about the possibility of a single-tier government for the County.

Roberts said County staff and councillors were keeping an open mind, and by hiring a professional consultant, would make decisions based on facts, not emotion.

With landfills, Roberts said challenges, such as landfills reaching end of life, and decisions about where waste will go in future, are Countywide. She said they need the help of the province. She noted Coun. Walt McKechnie has for years lobbied for incinerating of garbage. Dysart et al has requested the Association of Municipalities of Ontario (AMO) look into researching the idea on behalf of all townships across the province. Kennedy added that they are big items and with 6,500 Dysart residents, "we can't afford what needs to be done."

One resident said with electric vehicles becoming more prevalent due to concerns about climate change, Dysart could make itself a tourism destination by putting in car charging stations. Kennedy said it's definitely "on the radar" and would be discussed, including around the Head Lake Park master plan. Roberts added the units are not cheap and would have to be operated at cost recovery.

As for traffic along County Rd. 21, Roberts said Dysart et al, and the County, are looking into ways to calm the traffic, including a future pedestrian crosswalk.

Kennedy added that townships are now looking into the possibility of development charges, which would give municipalities more money from developers to do work. The two councillors said they'd also like to look at traffic in the downtown and Roberts said she would bring concerns to the next meeting mayors have with the OPP.

As for the park, Roberts reiterated they are working on a master plan as the park "is like a 40-year-old house in need of renovations". She said they are already holding talks with stakeholders.

With housing, Kennedy said he thought it was prudent to identify properties owned by the township and approach developers "to find out what they can do to get things rolling." He noted that Dysart had 296 properties of various sizes. Roberts said the County had committed to 750 units over the next 10 years. She said its achievable "if we all work together."

Both Roberts and Kennedy said they were happy with the outcome of the town hall.

"This has been great," Kennedy said. Roberts added they were hoping to have a positive conversation and felt that was achieved.

"We're here to get ideas from you, and let you know what we're working on."

HE ponders ward structure change

By Joseph Quigley

Highlands East council considered whether it would upend its ward system to make the deputy mayor an elected position.

Council discussed an organizational review Nov. 26 made by consultant Savino Human Resources Partners. The report recommended changes including more staff team meetings, the closure of fire halls and making the deputy mayor elected instead of appointed by council.

But chief administrative officer Shannon Hunter said that would not be simple, as that would create an undesirable six-person council under the current ward structure.

Council discussed changing the structure or letting councillors be elected at-large. Deputy Mayor Cec Ryall said he had no issues with making his position elected.

"Would not bother me at all," Ryall said. "There are advantages and disadvantages of having the ward system ... I would not believe in having our council members at large." Coun. Suzanne Partridge said she supports an elected deputy mayor and wants the wards to be more equitable.

"We need to realign our boundaries," Partridge said. "I don't think we should be voting for all council at large."

But Coun. Cam McKenzie said though he is okay with the position getting elected, he does not want to see his ward, as the smallest, get removed.

"I can see where this is going. Ward 1, which I represent, is going to disappear," McKenzie said. "I know we have limited numbers, but it's kind of a unique place."

Mayor Dave Burton said he would prefer wards be done away with.

"We still are not amalgamating. We are still territorial with each of the wards," Burton said. "We are here to represent all the people in Highlands East, not just our wards."

Council also discussed the consultant's recommendation to close one or two fire halls. McKenzie said it caused a "firestorm" of concern but Hunter emphasized that the municipality does not need to follow the review's recommendations.

They also touched on customer service. The review said the municipality should invest in more online and remote options, as well as educate residents about municipal rules.

Hunter said there was some disagreement in the interviews that informed the report. Staff said customer service is excellent while council said improvement is needed

McKenzie said he hears from people that they get left in "limbo" waiting for replies from staff and there needs to be more done to get back to people quickly.

"Answering a complaint, may not be able to do anything about it, but at least they know we got the message and we're dealing with it," McKenzie said

Council voted to accept the report as information.

Couple fitting pieces together

By Joseph Quigley

Brigette Gall and Michael Bainbridge said getting trapped at home by a 2018 cold snap inspired the unique business they are starting in Haliburton County.

Locked in with a group of friends, a large jigsaw puzzle became the centre of attention. The two had searched for another business model for Bainbridge, a professional mineral photographer.

The idea struck to turn his photos into puzzles, which led to their new business "The Occurrence." After months working from their home and online, they soft-launched a new jigsaw puzzle shop and factory Nov.

"There is increasingly a need for people to disconnect and have a real, physical, tactile experience," Gall said. "It's reminiscent of all those rain or snow days at the cottage or hanging out with the family."

The two kickstarted the business on Industrial Park Road in Haliburton with the help of the Haliburton County Development Corporation, which helped secure more than $40,000 in matching grants through the Rural Innovation Initiative Eastern Ontario and Business Expansion and Innovation Program. Their property features a factory-floor with all the tools needed to print puzzles in the back and a space to sell them at the front.

The two decided to print for themselves upon discovering how few places do. They said they could not find any printers based in Ontario and few in Canada. Most large printers who could work in bulk would not do the limited runs they were interested

"You got an artist, 'I want to do a limited edition number, my artwork in a puzzle." You have to order in large quantities to make it financially worthwhile," Gall said. "Printing in house, we can do small batches and high-quality puzzles."

One of the pieces they use is a piece of art owned by the County. It is a depiction of a map of the County, featured in a mural at the land registry office. The two presented to County council Nov. 27 and got permission to use the image, with a portion of sales going toward the Arts Council Haliburton Highlands artists in the school program.

"This is great stuff and it will help promote the area," Coun. Brent Devolin said. "Let it happen."

Bainbridge said their new business has gotten a positive reception so far.

"I don't think there's been a single sense of anyone who has said 'that's a stupid idea, you're crazy,'" Bainbridge said. "Almost invariably people say, 'that's really cool."

The two are not completely up and running yet, anticipating regular store hours to start in January.

"Really enthusiastic about the opportunity to do this and it couldn't happen without the help of HCDC," Gall said. "That's what's so great about this area, is people really are supportive of each other in a small community."

HOME OF THE HIGHLAND STORMS

Bantams drop 6-4 thriller to Bears

The Pepper Mill Steak & Pasta House – McKecks Place Rep. Bantams took on the South Muskoka Bears Nov. 27 at home and what a game it was.

The Storm came out strong in the first period, demonstrating great heads up play, resulting in an early goal.

Kaine Brannigan hustled and stole the puck with Cooper Coles rushing towards the net. Brannigan saucered a beauty pass to Coles, who made it 1-0.

Unfortunately, the lead was countered quickly as a puck deflected off an opposing player's skate to sneak by Taylor Consack to even the game 1-1.

Two Storm players took penalties, leading to many feverish shots on Consack but he kept the Bears at bay. With 31seconds left, defencemen Austin Boylan scored a lucky goal while dumping the puck out of his zone. The Bears goalie misplayed it and the Storm were up 2-1.

Both teams were evenly matched and battling hard for the puck in the second. The Bears got another goal to tie the game 2-2. With under five minutes left, the Storm took another penalty and the Bears made it 3-2. Nearing the end of the frame, the Bears took a penalty for too many players and Boylan sent the puck to Kyan Hall on the power play. He scored to make it 3-3.

In the third, the Storm appeared as though they were losing steam. It started off slow with numerous icing calls but after the Bears took a penalty for shooting the puck after the whistle, the Storm capitalized. Aiden Perrott assisted Boylan in capturing his second goal of the night, sending a shot from the point past the Bears goalie to tie it 4-4. Back and forth the score continued as the Bears were able to get another goal. The Storm continued to forecheck but with 2:55 left in the third, the Bears got another making it 6-4. (Submitted)

Highlander environment

Support growing for green burial society

By Joseph Quigley

The Haliburton Highlands Green Burial Society (HHGBS) formally launched Nov. 28 with 27 people now committed to bringing the environmentally-friendly practice to local cemeteries.

More than 30 people attended the society's inaugural meeting at the Haliburton United Church to discuss the idea that involves burying the dead using green practices in specialized graveyards or plots. Society founder Terry Moore and Green Burial Society of Canada board member Mark Richardson answered questions and discussed implementation.

Moore said he is pleased about the positive response. He credited it to the efforts of community organizations to raise a sense of environmental stewardship in Haliburton over the past decade.

"People are ready to have a conversation about this and I think people are now prepared to listen," Moore said.

Environment Haliburton! has developed the idea over the past few months with a working group. Moore brought the concept forward after his family's struggles with burying his son, Kyle Moore, in an ecofriendly way during the winter.

He presented to local councils earlier this year and they spoke supportively. But Moore identified barriers at the municipal level, such as their worries about cost and winter burials. There are now plans for a workshop in January with an external operator showing municipal staff and policymakers how a green burial could happen in the winter.

"Demonstrate how it's done in order to address some of the practical considerations that some of the townships have," Moore said.

Compared to cremation, green burials are more expensive, Richardson said. But he added they are still greener, given the carbon dioxide released into the air when burning bodies.

But the appetite for burials has plummeted. The Cremation Association of North America said the cremation rate in Canada was 72 per cent in 2018.

Moore said convincing lawmakers will take more public awareness.

"There is an interest in this and it's not just a niche group of people who are in the tree hugger community," Moore said. "The more conversations we have, I think it helps to build a different cultural norm."

Sharon Ireland attended and said it was a strong presentation.

"This is an absolutely great alternative to conventional burials," Ireland said. "We have an awful lot of environmental consciousness in the community towards our wild spaces."

Moore said green burials can happen if the community shows support.

"I'm very optimistic that we'll be able to remove the remaining barriers," he said.

What's on

Biggest cast ever for Nutcracker's 16th staging

In many ways, Haliburton County and Heritage Ballet's The Nutcracker are synonymous with the Christmas season.

The iconic ballet comes to the stage of the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion for the 16th time this Heritage Ballet's Julie Barban said it is the biggest cast ever - with 82 children - and about 10 adults, performing Friday and Saturday.

"We're up 10 kids," Barban said during rehearsal last Saturday. "We now have 82 kids. We had 72 last year. So, that's kind of new."

She added that Ania Smolen will play The Sugar Plum Fairy this year. She'll also play The Peacock.

"She was also The Peacock last year and she wanted to do it again," Barban said.

She added that with all of the new, young dancers, she has added a few extra things, which she always does.

Asked how she can keep the momentum going year after year, Barban said, "it has become a tradition and sometimes I wonder, oh my gosh, it would be nice to take a break but I don't know. I still love it just as much as the kids do. I don't see it ending for a while."

She said the other endearing thing for her about The Nutcracker is the music.

"I never seem to tire of the music. That's not totally true. After the Nutcracker, I don't want to listen to it for a while, but then as soon as I hear it, I have the dances in my head."

She said Dani Smolen is again busy working on costumes. She said she's been redoing all of The Snowflake costumes.

"I haven't even seen them, so it's going to be a surprise to me. And then there's a new Spanish. We did get a new Chinese costume this year because the other one was showing its age." She added there are new poinsettias and flowers as well.

They all began work on the ballet in late September, so with this weekend's performances finally upon them, Barban said, "I'm feeling excited." She is also looking forward to a nice long break afterwards.

Charlotte Moynes, 13, has four characters to play, including the Raven Queen, Snowflake Three and a Big Soldier. This is her seventh Nutcracker

"It's kind of nerve wracking because it's very stressful to get everything done for the fast changes," she said of the upcoming shows. She added that "in the big dances, it's harder, because with Snowflake Three, there's so many kids."

Despite the challenges, she is really looking forward to it. "I think it's kind of cool. Professional dancers are doing it and then Julie puts together choreography for our own ages and she makes everyone feel included and like they have their own personal role."

Shows are Friday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 7 at 2 and 7 p.m. See: onstagedirect.com or contact Barban directly: julie.barban@gmail.com 705-457-1990

Tinsel and tears for those grieving during holidays

Organizers of an upcoming church service say the Christmas season isn't always a magical time for everyone.

With people across Haliburton County dealing with grief, they are again offering Tinsel and Tears, a church service Dec. 8 at 2 p.m. at the Haliburton United Church

Pastor Garry Swagerman, from the Eagle Lake Community Church, who has facilitated several grief groups, says "Many people feel alone in their grief, but coming to this kind of service will show them that they indeed are not alone

"Come join with others who find it hard to see the tinsel through the tears of their grief. Come join with others to share in the hope that is so much a part of this season," added Mary Anne Swagerman

She said, "Many memories of loved ones that have died bring the color of gray to the season of green, red and

However, Tinsel and Tears is a Christian-based service put on by the Churches of Haliburton.

They want to give those who are grieving gifts of hope and good memories this Christmas. They want to let grieving people know that their loved ones are not forgotten, even though they are no longer with them. They want to let them know that they are not alone in this journey."

Refreshments will be served after the service. (Lisa Gervais)
